How Does Your Relationship with God Impact Others?

Therefore, be imitators of God, as beloved children. And walk in love, as Christ loved us and gave himself up for us, a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God. (Ephesians 5:1-2)

Having and maintaining a relationship with Christ is one of the most remarkable privileges afforded to us by our Father. He has called us to Himself, and we are justified by Christ's work on the cross (Romans 3:21-26). As we grow in our faith, we are taught spiritual discipline, to pray, to spend time in the Word, and to develop to be more Christ-like in the sanctification process. Our growth doesn't just benefit us, but the way we live our lives should be an example to our friends, and our family.

As we grow, people watch us. Our community, and those we know watch how we handle blessings and tragedies; they watch how we deal with temptation and anger. Our growth isn't seen or showed as prideful legalism but as a genuine matter of the heart, and when we surrender that over to Christ, it shows others not that we are better, but how graceful and merciful God is.

As others continue to watch us over time, they don't see a God who requires perfection. If we are transparent in our walk, and we are intentional about spiritual discipline and maintaining that relationship with God, it spills over to those around us.

What do people see just by observing your walk with Christ? Is He being glorified and is your relationship spilling over to others? Remember there is perception all around. May the God of grace be glorified.
